INFANT MORTALITY IN EGYPT.

Infants tolerate oppression - they detect interference for their benefit in all that affects their daily life, and the practical failure of the Government of India to enforce its plague regulations is a lesson to those who are anxious to rush in where Gurnea - or Cromer - has to tread. If your humanitarian were allowed to enforce here to-morrow all the laws that deal with, say, the care of infants and children in England, we venture to say that the instant construction of three new barracks for the statistics, which show pretty plainly that the mortality among infants of the first year of life amounted to 28.9% yearly average during the period 1888-1890. During the same period the mortality among infants of the same age in London averaged 16.1%.

CAIRO AGRICULTURAL SHOW.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE.

In spite of the absence of any exhibits of animals, owing to the persistence of bovine typhus, albeit with greatly diminished virulence, in Egypt, the Agricultural Show will be held on a scale far exceeding any previous exhibitions. We have no intention of referring in our columns to the value of the work done by the Khedivial Agricultural Society that were our comments on the Egyptian show addressed only to residents in the approaching show have a constant opportunity of observing for themselves what H. H. Prince Hussein Pasha Kameh, Mr. G. P. Flood, and their indefatigable coadjutors are doing for Egypt, we might content ourselves with saying that "good wine needs no bush." But at Cairo there are visitors innumerable who have not, perhaps, all realised the importance of what they will see—if they are wise—during the first four days of next week. They may not, all be interested in the various exhibits, but we imagine that the majority of them take some interest in the development of Egypt, in the prosperity of its people, and the economic stability of the country. They will share their many views on the progress made by Egyptian agriculture—the industry by which Egypt stands and falls—and cannot fail to be amazed at the rapidity of the transition from the primitive methods of sowing that were used by the landowner less than a generation ago, to the highly specialised and scientific machines which are coming everywhere into use in the Egypt of today. They will see every species of application of modern science to agriculture of twentieth century Egypt—Steam diggers and ploughs, pump, wind-mills, light railways, grain and cotton seed cleaners, threshing machines, oil engines, and decorticators, exhibits of phosphate and other fertilisers, and the rest of the apparatus, fine exhibits of cotton, sugar, cereals,—in a word the chief products of the country.

These things will enable them to understand in part why it is that Egypt has so rapidly recovered from the effects of the famine of 1889, and why she is now in a position to meet and overcome less than a generation ago, to the highly specialised and scientific machines which are coming everywhere into use in the Egypt of today. They will see every species of application of modern science to agriculture of twentieth century Egypt—Steam diggers and ploughs, pump, wind-mills, light railways, grain and cotton seed cleaners, threshing machines, oil engines, and decorticators, exhibits of phosphate and other fertilisers, and the rest of the apparatus, fine exhibits of cotton, sugar, cereals,—in a word the chief products of the country.

It is not our purpose in this article to furnish a list of exhibits or to give very lengthy and technical descriptions of machinery which only experts could write or understand. But, considering the importance of the exhibition and the ever-increasing prosperity of the Kingdom of the Khedive, it is our duty to give a few lines of preliminary description of its arrangements and some notice of the exhibits that will serve as a guide to those who wish to find out in which school of thought the machinery of the future lies. To begin with, a general statement: we may say that the machinery exhibits are more than twice as large as any other machinery exhibit in the world. To begin with, a general statement: we may say that the machinery exhibits are more than twice as large as any other machinery exhibit in the world.

Now for the details. After entering from the canal road we were led to the right side of the machinery exhibits in the old sheds on the west side of the central building. In the first of these are housed the British Engineering Co.'s machines, pumping machinery and steam and oil engines by Gwynne's, Ltd. Messrs. Turner's mills and portable and fixed steam engines, H.M.I. refrigerating apparatus, Mr. Dick Kerr's motors and dynamos, Caterpillar and Co.'s exhibit—all to be shown in motion, which should delight those who know little about machinery or wish to see the things "go." Then there is the exhibit of the Midland Engineering Works, Messrs. Ransome, Sims and Jeffrey's fixed and portable engines, boilers, mills and what not, with agricultural implements by the same name, and the locally-made machines, which include a collection of very useful pumps, Messrs. Allen and Alderson are showing Ransome and Proctor's 190 H.P. tandem engine, three oil engines, portable condensing machines, small steam machinery, etc. Hall and Son's cotton seed cleaner is an interesting exhibit, and then we come to the windmill and tower exhibited by Hasbah, Mohamed and Co., nearly all of whose machinery has been made at Alexandria. Davey, Paxman and Co.'s new steam-propelled oil engines by Messrs. P. Eny, pumps, and oil engines, with Messrs. H. Garrett & Co.'s productions. Steinemann and Malabar will represent tool, Messrs. B. Blacque will exhibit small steam-propelled machinery of British and Swiss make.

Passing the post-hole now, also a quantity of cattle for exhibition, we got to the new machinery halls, containing a host of celebrated machines, such as the new steam-propelled oil engines by Messrs. P. Eny, pumps, and oil engines, with Messrs. H. Garrett & Co.'s productions. Steinemann and Malabar will represent tool, Messrs. B. TWO JAPANESE PUBLICATIONS.

A NOVEL AND A JOURNAL.

The book under review is a satirical novel with a purpose—that purpose being the strengthening of the national cause by the publication of a tale designed to increase the dislike of Russia as generally entertained in England. The author of the present is apparent throughout. The style in which the book is got up is especially to be noticed, for it is out of the ordinary, and the printing, illustrations and above all the binding are of an order. It is printed on a special paper, and illustrated throughout by delicately executed drawings in ink and color, with a few elaborate color plates. The book is bound in a uniform size, and covers of a fine silk-like material are tastefully ornamented with colored drawings of Japanese scenes, with white silk on the back and front. The whole is enclosed in a cover fastened with ivory paper. The title of the book is "Hana," a daughter of Japan. It is written by Genzai Mitsuru, who is a very interesting biographical sketch of him. This contains 40 pages and is the most interesting part of the work. Forthwith of Russia is commonplace in the extreme, and not all that one would expect after reading the biography. We fall to discover the literary ability that we should naturally look for from an author with such a reputation, and one who, at the age of 41, written 38 works which comprise 50 volumes. His great work extends to twelve volumes, the concluding one not yet written, and is a complete history of the present war.

Possibly the tameness of the story may be due to the translator, or perhaps the Japanese language is not easily rendered into English. We must remember that many French novels, sparkling with wit in the language in which they are written, read like very poor stuff when translated. It is rightly considered to be a very poor compliment to an artist to admire the frame in which his picture is set, but our praise for this book is certainly limited to the exquisite method of its get-up.

The second publication under notice is "The Recreation Journal," published by Mitsumi and Sons' Tourist Agency, Ltd., of Japan. It is a very interesting and useful agency having himself made three tours of the world, in which he had ample opportunity of studying how a tourist agency should be conducted in order to prove a success. The journal gives the ideas of issuing a quarterly journal giving the latest information as to the economy, resources and progress of the country, with a view of making Japan and its condition known to Europe and America. Judging by the fact that Japan possesses very great attractions for the tourist, and in these days of extended travel will soon be familiar to the travelling public who can afford the necessary time and money to investigate for themselves the beauties of natural scenery, as well as its quaint and interesting people and buildings.

PROPOSED CHURCH HOUSE.

To THE EDITOR OF THE EGYPTIAN GAZETTE. Sir,—If the state of the church funds is such as to enable another church house to be built in town, I think it might spare a few pounds to put the fence round the Church Passage in order. At present it is disgraceful, and a terrible eyesore to the donor of both land and pavement: half the gate is off and half hanging on its hinges, as if it was the entrance to a public house. There is no fence at all. The donor used to get all these repairs done at his own expense, but last year the members, at their annual meeting, showed clearly that they did not want any more of him, by giving him a vote of 11, and that after his having headed the poll for 14 years! He was present with a certificate afterwards which stated that the congregation only disliked him because of his prodigality (with his own money). His thorough fall is but better relief. If they could keep the parsonage in repair it must really be a white elephant.—I am, etc., GEO. B. ALDERSON.

ALEXANDRIA MUNICIPALITY.

To THE EDITOR OF THE EGYPTIAN GAZETTE. Sir,—I was disagreeably surprised to find on reading the official statement of proceedings at yesterday's meeting of the Municipality, that there was not the slightest allusion to the Municipal Delegation against the conduct of the Municipal Delegation by one of the members of the Municipality. I could understand the Commission failing to allude to Press criticism, but when one of the chief members of the Municipal Commission writes to a local newspaper and accuses the Delegation of such conduct towards the Commission and the public think that these charges should be repudiated, otherwise we must consider that silence given consent, and the statement made by Mr. Alderson in the "Egyptian Gazette" is unwarrantable and therefore true in substance and in fact. In Mr. Alderson's letter he remarks:—"The Commission, on which I have the honor to sit, is only vouchsafed such information as the Municipal Delegation deems fit to put before it, and the information is generally so effectively 'cooked' that it throws little light on the subject concerned." Mr. Alderson in this sentence roundly accuses the Delegation of fabricating its official capacity information, for that is what the term "cooked" means in plain English. For my part I cannot conceive a more serious charge to bring against the members of the institution in question. Mr. Alderson has been long enough in the Alexandria Municipality to obtain an insight into the inner workings and his statement was evidently inspired by what he knew to be going on behind the scenes. Ought the Municipality to avow? This accusation without saying a word? Surely such a policy must leave a very faulty impression on the public mind. Either Mr. Alderson's accusation is true or false, and he would not have dared to make it in a newspaper unless he had good evidence to go upon. The only question is that I can come to is that the Municipality must be held to be guilty of the grave irregularities imputed to it by Mr. Alderson, unless it publicly and clearly proves that his statements are false or exaggerated.—I am, Sir, truly yours,

MISSIONS TO MOHAMEDANS.

To THE EDITOR OF THE EGYPTIAN GAZETTE. Sir,—In reading the leading article of the 7th inst. on missions to Mohammedans, I was glad to find the writer held the opinion that "Christianity is capable of supplying to the full man's spiritual needs," and that he ought to bring your readers to leave their own opinions and come to his way of thinking. I do not agree with him that missions to Mohammedans cannot be defended according to law and right reason (justified). If the Mohammedans are a creation of God, then it must be the "divine purpose" that he and his children should have the good news of the new life, paradise the character, and the pure man for the higher service when the earthly life ends. Inasmuch as the author of Christianity himself said "Preach the Gospel to every creature."

And if we, with the writer, believe that (the) Christianity (of the New Testament) is capable of supplying to the full man's spiritual needs, it seems to me that we fall in our duty if we withhold from our Mohammedan friends and neighbors the source of that supply. Again, history has proved clearly that vital Christianity when received lifts up its recipients to a higher moral level, and leads them to the very best and noblest conditions of life. I know, for example, a young Mohammedan who several years ago received Christ as his Saviour and began reading the New Testament as a believer. To-day, compared with his brother, who remained a Mohammedan, there is to say the least a very great difference in character, in the wife of his choice, in their homes, and in the influence they are exerting for the good of the world. What Christianity has done for such a man, I believe it would do for every man to serve God freely according to the light of his own conscience which has been enlightened by the teaching of the Gospel. I trust the time may soon come when the very best of this country will realize that it is within the scope of their functions to see that any law-abiding subject of this land shall be

CHURCH HOUSE SCHEME FOR ALEXANDRIA.

The ordinary annual general meeting of the voters of St. Mark's Church is postponed till the 16th February at 5 p.m. In addition to the matters already advertised for discussion the meeting will be invited to decide on the matter of the proposed Church House.

The following is the text of the Consul-General's Memorandum on the subject—
 On the 5th of May 1904 the Church officers of St. Mark's Church held a meeting and adopted a Resolution as follows—

"That it is highly desirable to provide a permanent residence for the Chaplain of St. Mark's and all States' Rank in the immediate vicinity of the former church, and the present Chaplain, the Rev. Canon Ward, M.A., finds it extremely difficult to get suitable rooms at Alexandria at a reasonable rental, even at a considerable distance from the Church, and it seems that this difficulty is not likely to diminish in the immediate future.

We find that if rooms were built over the Premises of Messrs. Allen, Alderson & Co., Ltd., on the North West side of the Church, which Premises stand on Church Property let to St. Mark's Building Association, Ltd., for a term of years at a rental of £200 per annum, those rooms would be well-situated for the Eastern buildings of St. Mark's B. A. Ltd., it is however to be noted that for the ground on which stand the buildings of Messrs. Allen, Alderson & Co., Ltd. We therefore propose with the assent of the Trustees of St. Mark's Church and property and of the Church community to extend to the same site on the basis of the ground occupied by Messrs. Allen, Alderson & Co., Ltd. of the other land let to St. Mark's B. A. Ltd., in order to further extend the same, by, by a building, we should obtain the assent of St. Mark's B. A. to construct the same, and that a memorandum for the Chaplain in accordance with Plans approved by the Trustees and the community, to be let to him at a moderate rate.

It is further decided to request Mr. E. B. Gould, I.S.O., H.M.'s Consul-General for the City and Port of Alexandria, one of the Trustees of the landed property of St. Mark's Church, with the assent of his Colleagues, to be good enough to enter into the necessary negotiations with St. Mark's Building Association, Ltd., in order to effect the necessary arrangements for the purchase of the land, and that a copy of this Resolution be sent to him."

This Resolution was signed by the Church officers, viz: Admiral Blomfield and Mr. Dodd as Trustees, and Mr. Kitchin as Treasurer.

A copy of it was sent to me on the 27th of May 1904, I wrote to Sir Massey Blomfield saying that I should be prepared to take action in the sense indicated by the terms of the Resolution inasmuch as that Resolution had been confirmed by a general meeting of the voters of St. Mark's Church convened and held for the purpose.

Such a meeting was held on the 26th June 1904 and a Resolution in the following terms was carried unanimously—

"That Mr. Gould be authorised by this meeting to approach St. Mark's B. A. on the lines of the aforesaid Resolution by the Church officers passed on May 5, 1904, attached to the notice of this meeting and to submit the result of his negotiations to a subsequent meeting of the voters of St. Mark's Church."

I now have to inform the meeting of the result of the negotiations I have had with St. Mark's B. A.

The Association is prepared, in return for an extension of the lease of the ground held by them from the Trustees of St. Mark's Church property to the 31st of December 1910, to cede to St. Mark's Church the use of the premises at present occupied by the Swiss Club and to furnish the sum of £2,750 for the purpose of building above the Swiss Club rooms such additions as may be necessary to make a good Church House, the balance of such money would be paid to the Trustees of the property.

This balance would properly be applied to repairs and improvements to the Church of St. Mark's.

This arrangement appears to be very advantageous to the Church Community of St. Mark's and I am very strongly in favour of this arrangement being effected at once.

I have ascertained that Lord Cromer who is the other Trustee of the property will be willing to enter into this arrangement on the condition that he is convinced that the Church Community is in favour of it.

It can be seen, as recommended by your writing for it on this occasion. I sincerely hope that we shall be able to do so satisfactorily by coming to it.

It only remains for me to put the formal proposition before you—

"This meeting is in favour of an arrangement being made between the Trustees of the property of St. Mark's Church and the St. Mark's Building Association, Limited, by which the Trustees of St. Mark's Church should cede to the latter the ground held by the said Association from the Trustees of St. Mark's Church to the 31st day of December, 1910, the said Association should cede to St. Mark's Church from the 1st day of January, 1906, the use of the premises at present occupied by the Swiss Club, and further furnish the sum of £2,750 for the purpose of building above the rooms, at present occupied by the Swiss Club aforesaid, such additions as are, in the opinion of the Trustees of the St. Mark's Church Property, necessary to make a good Church House, of no less sum than the said £2,750 that may be necessary for this purpose. Should the said building cost less than £2,750, then the balance should be paid over to the Trustees of the Property of St. Mark's Church to be expended in the repairs and additions to St. Mark's Church."

CAIRO SCHOOL OF MEDICINE.

THE SLEEPING SICKNESS.

Captain Greig, I.M.S., while passing through Cairo on his way home from Uganda, gave an interesting lecture before a very large and representative audience at the School of Medicine last Saturday afternoon. The lecturer is a member of the Royal Society's Commission, which has been studying the distribution and causes of "sleeping sickness" in Uganda and the neighbouring countries for the last eighteen months. The work of the Commission has been eminently successful, for the cause and the mode of infection have now been definitely ascertained, and it has become possible to diagnose the earliest stages of the disease, which will enormously facilitate measures to prevent the spread of this terrible and insidious disease.

The malady was first described in West Africa as long ago as the year 1830, but the real cause was not discovered until a hundred years later by the Commission, of which Captain Greig was a member, in Uganda. The first cases observed in Uganda were recorded as recently as 1901, its introduction there being due to the opening up of trade routes. It has already caused terrible and most costly mortality, for the sparsely populated Protectorate has already lost 100,000 human beings by the ravages of this disease, and at the present time the monthly death rate from this cause in Uganda is 1,000.

By means of large maps sent by the Egyptian War Office the distribution of the disease, as determined by the Royal Society's Commission, was shown. It is chiefly in the country around the northern end of Victoria Nyanza, that most of the cases occur and it is satisfactory to know that it has not reached the Nile. The disease occurs chiefly in thickly wooded parts of the country, and its severity varies with the physical character of the area. The cause of the disease is quite misleading, because the intense sleepiness occurs only in the last stage; and even this is not present in some cases, but is replaced by mania or morbid elevation of the mental powers. One of the most important results of the Commission's work was the discovery of the means of recognizing the early (pre-symptomatic) stages of the disease. The chief sign is the enlargement of lymphatic glands in the neck, and the presence in these glands of a fluid later in the disease, which contains certain parasites which are the causal factors.

After giving a detailed description of the signs of the disease, illustrated by photographs, Captain Greig went on to speak of the discovery of the causal agent. In the blood of every case of sleeping sickness a peculiar, very minute parasite (Trypanosome) was found. (Drawings of these parasites made by Professor Looss were shown). Blood containing these organisms, when injected into monkeys, produces all the symptoms of the disease. This same parasite was afterwards found in all cases of sleeping sickness examined in the Congo basin. These facts demonstrate the causal relationship between the parasite and the disease. Similar parasites are now known to cause similar diseases in cattle—the Indian disease "Surra" and the African disease "Muguna"—but the parasites of these diseases do not produce sleeping sickness in either man or monkey.

The parasite of the last-named disease is conveyed from man to man by the bite of a particular species of tsetse fly, called Glossina palpalis. (Specimens of this fly and a series of excellent drawings of it especially made for this lecture by Professor Looss were here shown). It sucks blood by means of a long proboscis; and by this means carries blood containing the germs of the disease, and thus conveys it to a healthy human being, and a diseased individual in the latter. It is most active during the day time, in this respect differing from the mosquito.

Two large maps of the district around the northern end of Victoria Nyanza were then shown. In one of these maps the areas infested with this particular kind of fly coincided with those infested with the disease. A further proof that this fly conveys the disease it was pointed out that such flies taken from an area in which sleeping sickness was prevalent, can communicate the disease to monkeys. The flies themselves, if kept away from any source of infection or taken from an area where there is no sleeping sickness, are quite incapable of causing the disease. Patients suffering from the disease in an area infested with this particular kind of fly coincided with those infested with the disease. A further proof that this fly conveys the disease it was pointed out that such flies taken from an area in which sleeping sickness was prevalent, can communicate the disease to monkeys. The flies themselves, if kept away from any source of infection or taken from an area where there is no sleeping sickness, are quite incapable of causing the disease. Patients suffering from the disease in an area infested with this particular kind of fly coincided with those infested with the disease.

In proposing a vote of thanks to Captain Greig for his lecture, Professor Looss remarked that the work of the Commission, of which Captain Greig was a member, was a brilliant example of the scientific method in modern medical research. Recognizing the hopelessness of directly attacking the mere symptoms of the disease, the investigations were directed towards establishing the cause with a view to the prevention of this terrible scourge. The vote of thanks was accepted by Dr. Elliot-Smith and carried by acclamation. Dr. Keatinge moved another about two hundred, among whom were Artie Pasha, Ibrahim Pasha Hussein, Mr. Laffoy, Sir John and Lady Evelyn, Mr. and Mrs. Sherburne, Captain and Mrs. Lyons, Mr. Littlewood, Mr. Miller, Captain Cunningham, and the staffs of the Kasr el-Ainy Hospital and the School of Medicine.

"As I laye a-thinking".
Epitaphy.

I remember reading in my young days a very remarkable book called "The Devil on two Sticks," which, to say no more than the name, was a translation from the French of "Le Diable Botin" by Le Sage, and is the only work of the kind I have come across.

The fantastic ideas of the author was to represent Amosens as carrying him to the air and lifting up the roofs of various houses, showing him what was going on within. Some of the scenes depicted were naturally very quaint considering the French origin of the book, they represented human nature both at its best and its worst, and, as may be readily imagined, they afforded proof of the keen insight into character possessed by the writer. Who could imagine have imagined more than that he pictured as taking place in the privacy of private apartments.

But the book was written with a deeper purpose than to afford amusement by laying bare the secrets of private life. Many of the incidents went to show how it is possible not to man, in spite of his talents, who only see the exterior side of his like-minded when they are without interest. If I may use the term, character, and to be capable of generous acts little suspected by his daily associates.

As a matter of course is also the case, for him is a creature of curious construction, in some cases so curious that it is very difficult to arrive at a true estimate of his character, or to know which side of it is the more predominant, the good or the bad. Even his pretensions, and when a man is simply a creature of impulse, and does not attempt to exercise control over himself, the bad sometimes gets rather a long reign.

No man is either wholly good or wholly bad, but unfortunately it is very much the custom to charge on the undue meanness, and quite lose sight of the only generous account to the good ones. If a little insight were given to the subject and an endeavour made to ascertain the mercenary tendencies and early training of the surrounding conditions, and above all the adverse circumstances which often lead to the traits in his character which we so strongly condemn call for sympathetic forbearance rather than complaint.

We want to hear in round a little more the good old adage.

"Be to his faults a little blind,"
And to his virtues ever kind,
Instead of this, the way of the world is to adopt just the opposite course. The result is much misunderstanding, ill-feeling, and general suspicion one of another, culminating not infrequently in actions for slander or libel, and the drifting apart from each other of those who with a better understanding would be close friends.

If some Amosens could give the hand of a back, a peep into the occupations of his staff on a given night, what would be the feelings with which he would meet his clerks on the following morning? I venture to think that while much that he had seen would have greatly shocked him, on the other hand he would have learned much that would have greatly surprised him, as to the unsuspected good in others, and that on the whole his estimate of human nature would have been raised rather than lowered by what he had seen.

For good is the ultimate goal of all, being so, the tendency of human progress must inevitably be an upward one, and although much in this life gives the pessimist ground for his croaking, the optimist is in the right, and hope, not despair, trust or our fellow creatures, not suspicion, should animate us as we go through the daily rounds of our life, dreary and monotonous as it may appear to some of us.

We ought also to exercise the same charitable judgment in criticizing the action of public men, and at least credit them with good motives, however one may disagree with the line of policy adopted by them. Instead of this our party language blind us too frequently to the merits of political opponents, and while often this is greatly on the surface, as for instance in presidential elections in the United States, it is more frequently deep-seated and productive of much injustice, causing unmerited obloquy to be cast upon thoroughly honourable men.

A good deal of carrying criticism frequently appears in the public press, much of it of a nature that can do little good, and being from anonymous letter writers is only derided by those at whom it is levelled, who was not well afforded to pass it by. I know that in Egypt it is said that it is useless or never possible for a writer to address his name to a letter of complaint, but I notice that signed letters do command attention, and frequently lead to reasonable action being taken, or satisfactory explanations being afforded.

As a getting away from Amosens, but, as I have observed before, thought takes a wide range if you let it go unchecked. I am just wondering what a peep into the Tsar's palace would reveal just now.

Would some of the abuse so freely showered upon the unfortunate monarch during the last few weeks be changed into pity for a man placed as he is, and would it not perhaps be realized that the system is more to blame than the man? Fortunately, Amosens is not at our command, and we are left to form our own judgment from the materials at our command. But above all things do let us be charitable in this as in everything else.

A BALLAD OF EGYPT.

THE LADY WAHIEDA.
By BARONNESS DE MALOITTE.

Eight years had flown and then the trouble came.

The spring began to fall 'twas less and less,

There is you know but very little rain.

So without work nothing but distress.

The fellah saw the fields on which he toiled

Showing no life, but harding into dust,

His many skilled devices too were foiled.

Old men were grim, the women's voices

Poor children sat like wails in row

Over the whiten'd riles, mute and crushed.

Feeding on shriv'd 'd dates which are so, so,

No filling in odd corners with a crust;

When lo! a holy man upon his way

To Mecca, spread his mat and knelt to pray.

Two days and nights he did not even drink,

And so the very people gathered round.

The elders looked, and then began to think

Perhaps the saintly one would bless the ground.

They bagged him thus, but he remained a

With lifted eye-balls gazing into space.

They fasted, too, until the time should come,

All time was Allah's—patience, then, and

On the third eve, he spoke as one awakes,

Where is the woman, mother of the son

Who has five brothers 'even for her sake,

The thing you pray for, surely shall be done

But I must speak with her—she shall not raise

Heaven's own reward, which afterwards is

They all withdrew and whisper'd, who is she!

They knew each other every one by name,

We fear it is a riddle—That may be

But we must find the answer all the same,

And now, said I, I'll ask my lord Almid,

He is much richer since the great Sir's death,

I think the younger one may have a lad

Who has five brothers. Here he held his

The humble folk talk not about the great,

They rarely look at them, as they pass by

Be it all simply—or in greater state,

Why hazard thus to meet the evil eye!

There have been Pashas, Allah give them

That brought much sorrow to the fellah race.

Mumud had fed and smoked, so in this mood

A suppliant—was better than a joke,

Quite slowly he absorbed his mental food

Then like an oracle at last he spoke

Go back, said he, and tell the holy man

I think I know the lady—if he lies

And if I find his promise in a sham

Or but a play of words—why then he dies!

Forthwith beneath the lily portals he

Strode on, a black ambassador in fact,

The slaves in order all stood by to see

And squatted at the diplomatic task—

They heard of suffering, they too might feel,

So one, then all before Wahida kneel.

(To be continued).

LE'EGYPT, INSPIRATRICE DES POETES

M. PAUL PLAN

L'Egypte a joué dans l'antiquité le premier rôle dans la littérature et dans les sciences. Le riche de son sol, le douceur de son climat, la beauté enchanteuse de ses paysages lui rendent tôt ou tard sa splendeur d'autrefois. Les peintres et les poètes, aussi bien que les littérateurs, peuvent y puiser de magnifiques sujets d'inspiration.
